EVENT DETAILS

This event brings together more than 350 guests to taste and celebrate the important partnerships between restaurants and farmers throughout the Midwest. All proceeds from the event go to the market's Link Matching Program, so that shoppers across the city can access the healthy and sustainably-raised foods sold at the Green City Market.

ABOUT GREEN CITY MARKET

Green City Market's mission is to cultivate a more sustainable Chicago food system through farmers markets, edible education programs, and food access initiatives. We offer vibrant, year-round markets paired with engaging at-market programs including chef demos, youth activities, Link matching, and compost. GCM runs a Produce Box in Bronzeville where we sell local fruits and veggies on a weekly basis throughout the summer. GCM also works with local schools to provide hands-on cooking and gardening education.

GCM was founded in 1998 by Abby Mandel, a notable Chicago food writer who wanted to increase the availability of local, sustainably grown food. What started as a small startup with six farmers in an alley next to the Chicago Theater has since grown to include over 50 third-party certified vendors along with education and access programs that further create community around food.

ABOUT AMVA

A (Mostly) Veggie Affair raises funds for Green City Market's Link Matching program, which matches Link and SNAP benefits dollar-for-dollar up to $15 for shoppers at every GCM market location. The program ensures that low-income community members are able to shop for fresh, local fruits, vegetables, meats, and breads that otherwise might be cost-prohibitive. It is important to GCM that all Chicagoans, regardless of income level, are able to access good food and connect with local growers. AMVA proceeds benefit GCM Link Matching while raising awareness of the program.

The event will feature ~25 local chefs preparing dishes with GCM vendor produce. We'll also feature some of the city's best bartenders, brewers, and mixologists pouring drinks made with GCM ingredients and local spirits. Attendees can sample offerings, chat with chefs, learn about GCM's mission, and savor the taste of fall in the Midwest!

ATTENDEES

Attendees include professionals 25-55 years of age who share an interest in local food and sustainability.
